

ABSTRACT

Methods and apparatus to provide a platform-level network security framework are described herein. In an example method, a packet associated with a processor system is identified. A platform-level network security protocol associated with an extensible firmware interface is identified. Based on the platform-level network security protocol, the packet is identified with a network security condition.